

Boards and Commissions

The City of Bowling Green's Boards and Commissions are formed to assist the City Commission on important policy decisions that impact the community. These groups conduct short and long term planning, research, and discussions of specific issues which are essential to the continued growth and prosperity of our City. Some boards are designed to be the policy-making authority over a particular entity; for others, their mission is to make recommendations and advisory opinions to the City Council.

Citizen involvement in the community is vital for our success. The City encourages anyone who is a resident of the City to consider submitting a resume for appointment to one of Bowling Green's 31 boards and commissions. Appointments are made upon recommendation by the Mayor, and approval of the City Commission. Interested applicants should mail their resume and cover letter to "Boards and Commissions" PO Box 430, Bowling Green, Kentucky, 42102-0430.

Most boards/commissions meet monthly, although some meet quarterly, or even on an "as-needed" basis. Time commitments vary for each board, and preparation for meetings and special meetings sometimes requires an additional time commitment. Meeting times given below are generally accurate. However, times are occasionally changed, for various reasons. If you wish to attend a specific meeting, you may wish to check with the contact person on that board to verify the time and location.

As vacancies occur on City Boards and Commissions, they will be listed on this web site. In order to serve, you must live in the City. Any specific qualifications needed will be listed. Service on Boards and Commissions is without compensation.

History of Bowling Green

Beginnings

Celebrating 200 Years of Progress

In 1775, a ragtag band of explorers called "long hunters" reached the banks of a meandering river in the Kentucky territory, where they carved their names on beech trees to mark their passage through this vast wilderness. Their explorations had led them to a fertile land that was nourished by numerous rivers and streams, blanketed with thick forests, and composed both of gently rolling hills and rugged, rocky terrain. Within a few years, the long hunters would be followed by the hardy pioneers who attempted to establish more permanent settlements. The first, McFadden's Station, was located on the north side of the newly named Barren River in 1778. Robert Moore paused for a few days at the rough-hewn station in the early 1790's before continuing to his own homestead. He built his cabin alongside a large spring at what later became Bowling Green.

For a time the Revolutionary War, raging along the eastern seaboard, slowed the expansion of white settlements beyond the Appalachian Mountains. But by 1792, the Kentucky territory had entered the new United States as the 15th state, and within four years, land grants in the remote area first encountered by the long hunters were offered to Virginia's Revolutionary War veterans, many of whom brought slaves and indentured servants with them. They quickly set about the difficult task of carving out a toehold of civilization in the enormous wilderness.

At the behest of a petition by the new residents, in December 1796 the General Assembly passed an act, effective in March 1797, to establish Warren County, named to honor Dr. Joseph Warren, a hero of the Battle of Bunker Hill. Robert Moore and his brother George donated a two-acre plot on which to build a log county courthouse and jail. (This site is now the location of Fountain Square Park.)

The following year, the Moores offered an additional donation of more than 30 acres for the creation of a town to surround the recently constructed public buildings. At the first county commissioners meeting in early 1798, the pioneers decided that the new town would be "called and known by the name of Bolin Green." This name was after the Bowling Green Square in New York City, where patriots had pulled down a statue of King George III and used the lead to make bullets during the American Revolution.

Within only a few decades, Bowling Green was established as a commercial and transportation center for the South Central Kentucky area. After a brief competition with the small Jeffersonville and New Town settlements alongside the Barren River, Bowling Green gained the official designation of county seat in 1809 and incorporated in 1812.

By that time, various stores, a tavern and modest houses lined the streets around the courthouse square. The Mariah Moore House, completed in 1818, was one of the first substantial brick houses constructed. (Still at its original location on present-day State Street, it is today the oldest building in Bowling Green.)

In 1821, the Bank of the Commonwealth established a branch office in the town, creating important commercial ties with the rest of the state. By the late 1820's, Bowling Green expanded to include a locally owned and printed newspaper (Spirit of the Times), a doctor's office, a private school for boys, a Masonic lodge and several churches. Stagecoach lines connected the town to Louisville, Nashville and Hopkinsville, while flatboats carried tobacco, hams, whiskey and farm produce down to New Orleans.

Ambitious business leaders, such as James Rumsey Skiles, were instrumental in ensuring Bowling Green's success as a commercial center in the region. During the 1830's, their locally owned stock companies funded the clearing of snags from the Barren River to improve its navigability and the construction of the Portage Railroad to connect the docks to the center of town. Having demonstrated their determination, they then lobbied the state Legislature to fund additional improvements, including the construction of several locks and dams.

Agriculture provided the town's economic base, with the main trade products being tobacco, hay and livestock. Paddlewheelers and steamboats began to traverse the Barren River with increasing frequency, while the completion of the Louisville and Nashville turnpike in 1838 further strengthened Bowling Green's ties to the rest of the region.

By the 1840's, as the trappings of civilization continued to expand rapidly, Bowling Green was no longer a lonely settlement in the midst of a vast wilderness. In 1842, Joseph I. Younglove and A. Starr opened a drugstore in the Thomas Quigley building at the corner of Main and State streets, and under various ownership a drugstore remained at this location until 1980. The Marshall House Jewelry Store opened in 1847, indicating the increasing wealth of local residents. Meanwhile, shipping excursions to Louisville by steamboat, expeditions to the exotic and mysterious Mammoth Cave, and picnicking at Beech Bend offered a variety of entertainment. By the late 1850's, Bowling Green boasted several manufacturing facilities as well, including an iron foundry, woolen factory, candle factory and several flour mills. Finally, a number of prosperous planters' estates had been firmly established on the outskirts of town, including Sen. Joseph Underwood's Ironwood, James Skiles' Kinloch, and John Clark's Boxerwood. these houses continue to stand today, only a few of the enduring reminders of Bowling Green's successful transition from a rudimentary pioneer settlement to a thriving commercial center.

The Bowling Green Area Chamber of Commerce was incorporated in 1935 and served the area continuously since. In February 1983, the Chamber moved into its all-purpose building at 812 State Street, its fourth home.

When the U.S. Chamber of Commerce began its accreditation program in the 1960's, the Bowling Green Area Chamber of Commerce became the fourth chamber in Kentucky to be accorded that designation. Accredited in 1973, the Chamber earned reaccreditation in 1978, 1984, 1989, 1994 and 1999. Out of more than 110 chambers of commerce in the U.S., only 496 are accredited. With 110 chambers in Kentucky, only six are accredited. The accreditation procedure identifies a chamber as effectively serving the growth and development needs of its market and helping to make the area, state and nation a better place to live.

About the ChaChamber Facts

The Bowling Green Area Chamber of Commerce is the fourth largest in the state with more than 2,500 members, representing more than 1,500 businesses and individuals.

The Bowling Green Area Chamber is one of only six in the state accredited U.S. Chamber of Commerce and has been accredited for more than 20 years. The Bowling Green Area Chamber has achieved the Certified City designation in Bowling Green-Warren County every year the Kentucky Chamber conducted the program, which began in 1981. Bowling Green-Warren Co. was inducted into the program's Hall of Fame in 1991.

Through the Chamber's economic development efforts, more than 10,000 manufacturing, distribution and regional office jobs have been created in Warren County since 1990.

The Chamber's Leadership Bowling Green program has graduated more than 100 leaders since its inception in 1985.

The Chamber annually recognizes the Industry of the Year, the Farmer of the Year, the Small Business Person of the Year, Global Business Advocate of the Year and the BusinessWoman of the Year (ATHENA Award).

In 1995 the Chamber received an Award of Excellence in the newsletter/tabletop category from SIDC Literature and Promotional Awards Competition. The Chamber's "Bowling Green" magazine and Annual Report/Action Plan have also been winners in this competition.

The Bowling Green Chamber of Commerce is a Certified Community under the Kentucky Certified Communities Partnership program. Our Chamber remains the only Chamber in the state to receive at least one Innovation Award each year since the program's conception.

The Chamber answers more than 7,000 inquiries about Bowling Green and Warren County annually.

In an effort to keep area residents informed about legislative activity during Assembly sessions, the Chamber sponsors legislative forums that give interested citizens the opportunity to meet legislators. These forums are aired on Insight Communications, giving many Warren County residents the opportunity to keep up on legislative activity.

Insight Communications and the Chamber produce the "Chamber Monthly" program, which highlights Chamber and community activities and airs on Insight Communications Channel 5 at the following times:
